

In the Claims

1) A method comprising:

a surface management system exchanging information with a power management system of a device, to allow the two systems to communicate.

2) An apparatus comprising:

a semiconductor chip that includes an integrated power control functionality to reduce pin count for multiple voltages in a multi-system environment.